CANCER SURVIVOR BEATS ODDS TO BECOME DOCTOR

- |   |   |          |
|---|---|----------|
| 1 | A young Port Elizabeth woman who almost died of leukaemia as a child has beaten the odds to realise her dream of becoming a medical doctor. It has been a long, hard road for Nosiphiwo Ntenge, 23, of Motherwell, whose father is a security guard and mother sold roosterkoek to supplement the family's meagre income.  | 5        |
| 2 | But sheer grit and determination have pulled her through and, on January 1, she will proudly don her white coat and stethoscope for the first time as a qualified medical doctor. The youngest of six children, Ntenge was diagnosed in 1990 with acute lymphoblastic leukaemia, when she was just eight months old.  | 10       |
| 3 | After three months of chemotherapy at the Red Cross Hospital in Cape Town, she went into remission and returned home to continue her three-year treatment at the Paediatric Oncology Clinic at Livingstone Hospital. Her final bone marrow result in 1993 was clear. Although her cancer was in remission, Ntenge had to visit her doctor, Abe Daniels, regularly for check-ups until she was 18, and this is where her dream of one day becoming a physician was born. | 15       |
| 4 | "I think I was six years old when I first decided I wanted to be a doctor, and I used to put on Dr Daniels' stethoscope during my visits and pretend to be him," she said. "It was just a childhood dream at that point. But in Grade 8, I started working seriously towards the dream, with his help. I never doubted that I would be a doctor – I knew that if I worked hard enough, I would get the money to study. There are always bursaries."                     | 20       |
| 5 | The petite Ntenge, who will be working at the Port Elizabeth Hospital Complex from next year, slogged tirelessly to make sure she was accepted into medical school at the University of Cape Town. "I knew I had to get good marks and so I worked hard every day towards that – and it paid off. I got accepted on my trial results."  | 25       |
| 6 | The motivated woman saw how her parents, Mbuyiseli and Nokhangelekile, battled to educate her sister and four brothers, yet all of them have gone on to study further, and she worked even harder to achieve her dream. "I also had good role models who inspired me. Dr Daniels, who made me want to become a doctor, and my older brother, Siyanda, who was one of those pupils at our school, Douglas Mbopha, who was always among the top achievers," Ntenge said.  | 3035 |

7 Daniels said Ntenge was one of a kind. “I am very proud of her. Once she made the decision to be a doctor, she did everything in her power to make sure she got her dream. “From when she was in Grade 8, she used to bring me her report card and we would go through it and I would tell her where to improve – she constantly did well. She did not fail one subject at university. She worked over holidays and weekends, without gadgets like laptops. She should be an inspiration to many.” He said Ntenge qualifying as doctor was the best thing that had happened to him. “It proves what perseverance, dedication and commitment can do. Yes, I am thrilled to bits ... I salute her.”

HOW TO STAY MOTIVATED

Motivation is very powerful and studies have shown that motivation is more important than intelligence and ability in determining success. No one, however, can motivate you but yourself.

Limit distractions by creating a space that will allow you to concentrate while you work. It is easy to lose motivation if you are tempted to do other things. Focus on achievement. Can you think back to when you achieved something? How did it feel? How will you feel if you can achieve again? 5

It is important to push yourself to succeed. It will make the rewards much sweeter. Don’t put off till tomorrow what you can do today! The longer you avoid doing something, the harder it will be to get it done. Do the hardest and most boring things first and get them out of the way. 10

Find something of interest in your studies. If you start to enjoy what you are learning about, you will do better at it. Spend at least an hour a day empowering yourself. This can be achieved by reading good books, listening to inspiring messages and finding inspirational quotes. 15

A bit of competition can be a great motivator. Start a study contest with your friends. Dream about your future. What do you need to get there? If you really want something badly enough, you will have to work hard to get there.

That moment right then are a large part of what hiking is all about.	5
